MANAGER'S COMMENT

Introduction AVI Worldwide Opportunities Fund's share price increased by 2.2% with exposure to Uranium a key driver.

Sadly, the rally that the sector had been enjoying ground to a halt in January mainly due to expectations of a fall in interest rates becoming less certain. Pleasingly our portfolio had a positive month and returned 2.2%.

The key driver was again our exposure to Uranium. The price of the metal spiked sharply higher as nuclear energy generators feared that would not be able to obtain sufficient supplies. Shutting down a nuclear reactor through a lack of uranium would be eye watering expensive. Kazakhstan is the world's largest producer and reports that the country's mines were failing to meet production targets unnerved the nuclear industry. There remain geopolitical risks in that Russia could use its influence to restrict supplies to the West driving prices higher. Nevertheless, we have halved our position crystallising significant gains. The current spot price is now higher than our initial hopes and the size of our investment exceeded our conviction. Since the end of the month Kazakhstan has again reduced production forecasts due to a lack of sulphuric acid a key material used in the extraction process.

Tufton Oceanic The shares trade at a 26% discount and a wind up in 2028 has been announced.

We initiated a position in Tufton Oceanic which owns a fleet of ships mainly bulkers and tankers which it leases to the major shipping lines. ESG rules are progressively restricting the speed that vessels can travel at. This effectively reduces supply at a time when shipyards have no capacity to build bulkers and tankers as demand for container ships has already filled their order books. Second hand values should be firm. The trust recently announced that it would hand back to shareholders much of the proceeds of the disposal of their last container ships and wind up the trust in 2028. Given the shares trade at a 26% discount that represents a useful pull to redemption. It is encouraging to see the managers buying a significant number of shares.

Oakley Capital The shares trade at a 30% discount despite being one of the best performers in the industry.

Our biggest detractor was Oakley Capital. The shares have been drifting since their December trading update in January. There seems to be little reason for the pull-back as Oakley has been performing well at portfolio level. Private equity trusts look eye watering expensive under the current cost disclosure regime which makes it impossible to own for some advisers. This explains why Oakley trades at a 30% discount despite being one of the best performers in the entire investment trust sector. News flow on this issue has improved and Oakley's share price would rise sharply once the cost disclosure issue is resolved.
